BOB JONES COMMENTS

A few years ago while I was engaged in an evangelistic campaign in a West Virginia city I heard the following story. It was told to me by the pastor of the First Methodist Church. I am giving it in almost the very words of the minister.

"When I came here as pastor two years ago I was unpacking my things at the Methodist parsonage. A man came in. 'My name is John and I want to talk to you.' That is the way the man began his conversation. 'I want to join the church next Sunday. That is what I want to talk about.' I told him that I would be glad to receive him and I began to write his name in my little book. 'Before you write my name down I want to tell you my story.'"

"You are the pastor of a wonderful church in this town. I know because they have turned me out numbers of times. They won't let anybody stay in that church who gets drunk and I am awfully weak. I was born with a craving for whiskey. Every time I got drunk they turned me out and then I joined again and they would take me in. The last time they turned me out they told me they weren't ever going to take me in again, but I've been sober for a month and I've been praying hard. I don't believe I am ever going to fall anymore! I told him to come to church Sunday and I would take him and that I would pray for him.

"A few minutes later the Chairman of the Board called me. I told him that I was going to receive the man next Sunday. 'I hope you won't' he said. 'He has disgraced us many a time. You'll have to turn him out within a month.' 'All right, we'll turn him out and then take him in again if he wants to join,' I replied.

"The next Sunday I opened the doors of the church. The man came forward. I gave him the vows of membership. The people bowed their heads as if they were embarrassed. Only one man spoke to him. He came by at the close of the service and said, 'Well, John, I hope you'll stick this time.'"

"The man stuck. He lived a sober, manly Christian life for a year. He was always at prayer-meeting, at Sunday school, and at preaching service. People learned to believe in him and respect him. One day he was taken ill. Several days later he died. Just before he passed away he said, 'I am dying. I want you to conduct my funeral. Tell the people I am sorry I ever got drunk. Tell them there was no excuse for it. Tell them I fell because I took my eyes off of Jesus, and that that hope of victory over temptation is in Him. When you have told them that, I want you to say one good word for me. I want them to know that I didn't fall every time I was tempted. I was tempted every conscious moment, day and night. During the last twelve months I stayed sober, but many a night when everybody else was sleeping I have walked the floor and prayed God to save me. I do want my friends to know that while I fell I didn't fall every time I was tempted.'"

My preacher friend told me that this incident gave him a new appreciation of the battles the average man fights. Only God knows the struggle that often goes on in the souls of the purest men and the best women we meet everywhere.

Hints for Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

A GOOD general rule to follow in seasoning green vegetables is to use a dash of sugar to a pinch of salt. Without artificially sweetening the dish, the sugar restores the garden sweetness which so many vegetables begin to lose on their way to the kitchen.

Use needles to pin down the pleats when pressing a pleated skirt. The needles will leave no marks when you remove them.

A few juniper berries, obtainable at the drug store, placed in a frying pan that has been heated until very hot, will release aromatic fumes which will quickly drive the odor of cooking out of the house.

MOUNTAIN LAUREL FESTIVAL

Pineville, Ky., May—The complete program for the third annual Kentucky Mountain Laurel Festival to be held in Cumberland State Park, near Pineville, on June 9 and 10, has just been announced by R. H. Barker, chairman of the program committee. The festival will be held in a rugged section of Cumberland State Park, easily accessible by a new road just completed by the State Highway Commission.

Two days of entertainment, beginning with a band concert by the Eastern Kentucky State Teachers College band, Richmond, and ending with tours covering all parts of scenic Southeastern Kentucky have been planned. The Mountain Laurel Queen will be selected from a number of Kentucky beauties representing the colleges and universities of the state. Twelve institutions already have selected their representatives and others will be submitted within the next few days.

The morning program will begin at 10 o'clock Friday, June 9, with a band concert. Mountain singers from Henderson Settlement School, Linda, Ky., then will give a number of selections. Mrs. Anne Walker Burns, who originated the idea of the festival, will talk on Dr. Thomas Walker and the Festival Idea. The quartet from Union College, Barbourville, then will sing and a band concert will close the morning program. Lunch will be served on the grounds but visitors who desire may bring their own lunches.

In the afternoon, Tom Wallace, editor of The Louisville Times, will speak on "Look to the Laurel" following the presentation of the operetta. The queen then will be selected and crowned by Governor Ruby Laffoon. A court of approximately 85 persons, representing all the cities in the Cumberland Valley, will participate in the coronation. A special dance, "Spirit of Mountain Laurel," will be given before the queen by Peggy House, Louisville dancer. This number was created by Anne Bullitt Brewer, head of the school of dancing of that name.

The site of the festival is in Laurel Cove. Visitors will park their cars in a large lot and walk a short distance through walls of mountain laurel to the huge natural amphitheatre where the festival will be held. A sheer cliff rises one hundred feet to form a back drop for the stage. A grass-covered stage designed by E. T. Hutchings, Louisville landscape artist, faces a sloping hillside where the visitors to the festival will sit. There will be no admission charge, but the festival is financed by a parking charge of 25 cents for each automobile.

KENTUCKY DAY

You are invited—all the readers of this paper—are invited to help Kentucky celebrate our State Day at Chicago's Century of Progress. It is a great day for this state, and you must be there to take part, if you possibly can.

June fifth—next week Monday—is the day. Can you be there? Governor Ruby Laffoon will lead the state parade. This is your chance for a big time.

Be sure to make arrangements for rooms and the care of your car, if you drive. We have planned with the Visitors Tourist Service of Chicago—an organization approved by Chicago's Mayor, City Council, all the churches, and the Exposition itself—to care for those of our readers who wish their help.

Membership in Visitors Tourist Service, Inc., provides for reservation of rooms for you in congenial homes, at $1.00 to $2.00 a day. It also provides for the parking of your car, in public parking spaces, at no cost. It also gives you the unrestricted use of their big clubhouse at 209-219 S. Wabash Avenue, at no charge. And it gives you free information, and help, all the time you are in Chicago.

If you are planning on going to Chicago for Kentucky Day—or at a later date—just ask any church, lodge or Chamber of Commerce, or send in to us for details of membership in this helpful organization.

Honored at U. K.

John Marshall Salter, a student at the University of Kentucky, Lexington, has been honored by being elected president of the Pre-Medical Society and will serve in that capacity during the years 1933 and 1934. This is the highest honor that can be bestowed upon a pre-medical student.

Young Salter is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Salter of Paintsville.—Paintsville Herald.

And is a cousin to E. L. Williams, leading merchant at this place.

The Statesmanship of Bryan

W. J. Bryan, the Democratic nominee for President in 1896, was ridiculed by business and finance as a dangerous agitator whose election would jeopardize, if not actually destroy, the prosperity of the nation. Mr. Bryan lived to see everything he advocated in the notable campaign of 1896, and later, become either a part of the organic law of the nation or else crystallize into statutory provision, with two exceptions. One was the coinage of silver and the other was the guarantee of bank deposits. The country in 1896 faced the same serious economic collapse, especially in farm prices, that recurred in 1931-32-33. Mr. Bryan's demand upon the people to meet this situation was to decrease the purchasing power of the gold dollar by increasing the volume of metallic money through restoring silver to the ratio it held with gold prior to 1873, with free and unlimited coinage at the old established ratio. Mr. Bryan emphasized in this campaign that he was not especially an advocate of silver because silver was mined in the United States but because silver had been stricken down by the suspended coinage of it and what he primarily wanted to restore was more money. He stood for the free coinage of silver as an inflation rather than greenbacks. This attitude of Mr. Bryan, one issue upon which, probably, he lost the election through the tremendous campaign fund put in against him, is likely to be adopted by the world in the international monetary conference which is to be a part of the international economic conference in London next month. The United States government has gone so far in the direction

FOR COUNTY JUDGE

The Courier presents this week for the consideration of Morgan county Democrats the candidacy of J. V. Henry of Cottle for County Judge of Morgan county.

Mr. Henry is a leading Morgan county farmer of ripe experience. He served a term as County Judge some years ago and made the county a good official.

Mr. Henry's record and his personal business experience place him as a man who will be conservative in the management of the county's business.

The county's financial affairs are public business and the law requiring the publication of the financial statement annually will be insisted on with Mr. Henry as a member of the Fiscal Court.

The Courier submits this candidacy with the confident assurance that it will receive the earnest consideration of the Morgan county Democracy.

TO WED TODAY

This afternoon two of our prominent families are united when at 2 o'clock Miss Dorothy Turner becomes the happy bride of Lauren Mathis. Rev. Harlan Murphy officiating. The ceremony is in the beautiful home of the bride's parents on North Main street; rather an informal affair in the presence of a host of young friends. Miss Audrey McKenzie is bride's maid and Mr. Jay Burton acts as best man.

Miss Dorothy, is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Turner and is one of our Morgan County High School students.

Lauren is the third son of the late Everett Mathis, an ex-county attorney of Morgan, and Mrs. Myrtle Mathis now of Louisville. He has made a fine record as a student in the Morehead Normal and is now in the Arnett Drug store of this place.

The young couple immediately after the ceremony, motor to Louisville to spend the week end with the groom's mother.

May June roses and many sunbeams of life brighten their pathway thru the bright future which lies before them.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Reed and little daughter, Jean, moved back to Ashland Saturday. During their short stay here Mr. and Mrs. Reed have been a help to our community and we are sorry to lose them.

We are glad to record that Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sebastian and son Don again occupy their beautiful home on Prestonsburg street. They have been missed and all their friends give them a hearty welcome back home.

THE LONDON ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

The American delegation that sails today to take part in the London Economic Conference is not going to a picnic. Though Secretary of State Hull is expecting material results from the negotiations, the difficulties cannot be minimized. The task of winning over the united action of the nations of the world to combat the forces of the depression is no easy matter. Leadership is offered by the Government at Washington, but the thing in doubt is what has been termed the "fellowship" of statesmen and peoples.

The aim of President Roosevelt is not only to stabilize exchange by the establishment of a sound monetary system and universally to lower trade barriers, but to get other nations to adopt his emergency relief programme to reduce unemployment and to raise the prices of basic commodities. It is one thing to win Congress over to his plans, it is quite another to prevent political obstruction in other countries.

The obstacles to success are numerous. Nationalism opposes every step toward a give-and-take basis of policy. International rivalry and political differences stand in the way of cooperation. With every country wanting to have its cake and eat it, too, to export its goods and at the same time embargo imports from every other country, the restoration of commerce is impossible. If the world is to get on its feet there must be economic peace and cooperation instead of a continuation of the present suicidal trade war.

The Washington Government is prepared either to lead the nations or to organize our national economy if they fail. The authority which the President has asked Congress to confer upon him to raise as well as to lower tariffs is a two-edged sword. If the world is not prepared for the "new deal" then America will embark upon a new and ordered form of economic isolation.

The reason for Secretary Hull's optimism is the concurrence of views at the White House parleys. It is augmented by the present critical nature in world affairs and the imperative necessity of a change. Sir Josiah Stamp is not so optimistic. "A Golden Age of Economics," he declared in Toronto last week, "cannot be looked for in a Stone Age of economic thought." The British economist was regarding the situation from the European angle.

A defeatist attitude, however, is out of place. The London conference offers the nations of the world the opportunity to get together for the benefit of all. The Roosevelt Administration provides the leadership for the parleys.—Courier Journal.

Takes New Position

Miss Lula Allen, who had been in the employ of the commissary at Camp City for about 25 years, has resigned there and takes up her new work today as bookkeeper of the May Grocery Company of this place, in which she owns a third interest. Miss Allen and her sister, Mrs. Minnie Lacy, have just moved into their new home at White Oak and she will drive from there to her work.

Awarded Scholarship

Mildred Salter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Salter, of Ezel, succeeded in winning highest honors in her class in the Ezel high school and was awarded a Free Scholarship in her choice of a Stenographic, Bookkeeping or Telegraph Course at the Chillicothe Business College in Chillicothe, Missouri.

Troy Morris Is Killed

Troy Morris, who was to have been tried at the coming session of the Morgan circuit court for the killing of his nephew, a Mr. Alfrer, was shot, presumably from ambush, on Monday as he was on his way home from his brother's place.

Attend Graduation

Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Perry, Malcolm Allen, Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Keeton, and Miss Ethel Mae Keeton attended the graduation of Mrs. Bessalene Allen from Wesleyan college at Winchester Tuesday. Mrs. Allen received her A.B. degree.

The Right Place

"I've come from the employment bureau, ma'am," said the girl. "They said you wanted a servant." "But I do all the house myself," replied the lady of the house. "Then the place will just suit me."

A FRIENDLY TALK

West Liberty, Ky., May 30, 1933. To the Voters of the 37th Judicial District:

I have just returned to Morgan county and am beginning an active campaign for the Democratic nomination for Circuit Judge of the 37th Judicial District, and I hope to see as many of you as possible. But owing to the short time that will elapse between now and August 5, the date of the primary, it will be impossible to see all of you. Therefore I want to solicit my many friends to push my candidacy from now until the primary, and we will win this nomination by a handsome plurality, but overconfidence serves to defeat many a candidate who could have won. You know me and my past life and I am not saying that I am going to select any one law and enforce especially, but I will promise you this, that I will, if nominated and elected as your Circuit Judge, serve you in the future as I have in the past and that I stand for equal justice to all and special privileges to none, and that my only motive in being a candidate is to be able to serve you to the best of my ability and not to create a political machine for myself or my friends.

To the various candidates for county office, I want to say that I will not interfere in your races and I hope that you will be able to support me as your fellow countryman and neighbor, and that regardless of who is nominated and elected that we may serve together for the best interest of our county and state, and forget all selfish interest, and we will have accomplished something for ourselves as well as for our county and state.

Respectfully submitted,

LYNN B. WELLS

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN

An address by Gov. Ruby Laffoon and a trip to the Capitol at Frankfort are among the features of the 13th annual Junior Week at the University of Kentucky June 5-10. Approximately 500 select 4-H club boys and girls from 80 counties will be in attendance, as a reward for their interest in better agriculture and homemaking. They will be selected in county contests and will be the best of the 22,000 club members in the state.

Classes in farming and homemaking will be conducted by the faculty of the university for the benefit of the juniors, and demonstrations in farm and home practices, judging of baked and canned foods, a style show, health contest and other events will keep the boys and girls busy. Several state champions will be selected to represent Kentucky at the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago.

The visiting boys and girls will be housed in the university dormitories. Each day will begin with a convocation in the soldiers memorial building, and close with vesper services and a program in the open-air theatre. Speakers include President Frank L. McVey of the University, President Charles Turck of Centre College, Governor Laffoon and Dean Thomas P. Cooper of the College of Agriculture.

Bloat in Cattle

Reports received at the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky indicate that bloat in cattle is prevalent this spring, due to wet weather and luxuriant growth of grasses, especially clover.

There are several effective ways to treat bloat, says Dr. W. W. Dimock, head of the department of animal pathology. Often, however, the animal is not found until dead or too sick to recover.

In acute cases, the animal is sometimes tapped in the region of the flank and, after the gas escapes, a mixture of a half-ounce of formaldehyde and a pint of water poured through the opening. Another method is to pass a tube through the nose into the stomach, to let the gas escape.

A simpler method is to drench the animal with one of three following solutions: one-half ounce of formaldehyde in a pint or more of water; a quart of white mineral oil containing two ounces of spirits of turpentine; or two ounces of coal oil in a pint of oil or milk. Drenching the animal with one of these mixtures is usually sufficient in chronic or slowly developing bloat. It is customary to move the animal about and to place a stick or gag in the mouth as a means of aiding the gas to escape.

Bloating may be prevented by keeping cows off pasture in the morning until the dew is gone. It also may be advisable to feed a small amount of well dried timothy or mixed hay before allowing them to go on pasture. Further, one may remove the animals after they have been on pasture three or four hours.

Some stock owners report that salt and ginger, an ounce of each, given in the feed or as a drench, will help to prevent bloat. Formaldehyde in water is the most effective drench. An hour or two after giving the formaldehyde solution it is advisable to give a quart of mineral oil.

Henry Ford Dearborn, Mich.

May 22, 1933

I suppose that I may claim to be the first Ford Dealer. I not only made cars, but sold them and frequently delivered them myself.

The "drive away" is not new; often I have driven cars from Detroit to towns in Ohio or Indiana or Michigan to make delivery.

There were no good roads in those days, and the people where I drove had never seen a motor car before.

My first really enthusiastic customers were Country Doctors. They were the first to realize the value of dependable transportation to a widely scattered practice.

Even today I occasionally hear from some of those first Ford users. We had to teach local mechanics how to care for the cars. That is how Ford Service began, which is now found everywhere in the world.

We believed from the beginning that a sale does not complete our transaction with our customer — it creates upon us an obligation to see that our customer's car gives him service. Ford Dealers know their duty to the public in this respect.

I can say of Ford Dealers generally that they have been and are men of character and standing in their communities. Most of them have been with us many years, which indicates that we agree on basic business principles. The Company provides that the methods used to sell the Ford car are consistent with the self-respect of the Dealers who handle it.

The present Ford V-8 is the peak of our 30 years experience. We have never made a better car. Its eight-cylinder engine is powerful and smooth running. The car is admittedly very good looking and has comfortable riding qualities. It is economical in operation because of advanced engine design and low car weight. It is the fastest, roomiest and most powerful car we have ever built.

The nice wide front veranda adds much to the appearance of the Cole Hotel. The beautiful sun porch connecting with the family living room will mean to the family many quiet, pleasant evenings together.

Rev. and Mrs. N. S. Loper of Buchanan, who assisted Rev. and Mrs. I. J. Scudder the past two weeks at Grassy Creek, returned home Saturday. The meetings were well attended in spite of the rainy weather and the busy season for the farmers, although there were not many conversions.

This was an all day gathering and was attended by a large number of relatives from far and near. The community in its generosity opened its homes and served dinner to all.

Our Government —How It Operates

By William Bruckart

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

THERE is every evidence that when, in 1913, congress passed a law creating the Department of Labor, that few of those who were most vociferous in support of the proposal had any conception of what the new department of the government was to do. A review of the debates of the time indicates rather clearly that somebody wanted to do something for labor, but they did not know exactly what that something should be.

So I am prepared to say that it was the administrative officers who have filled the several posts from secretary of labor down the line of rank who have made the Department of Labor something of value. Some of those observers who watched proceedings when congress enacted the law tells me that the movement had every appearance of a "sop" to organized labor, and if their conclusion be true, it certainly can be said now that the legislators builded much better than they knew.

The law which those legislators passed said the Department of Labor was to promote the interests of labor, of the working people of the country, that their working conditions might be improved and that their opportunities might be advanced. While I still entertain some doubt concerning what congress thought this would mean, it has become quite evident that it is possible for the great intangible thing, called government, to act in a very personal capacity when occasions require. It has so acted through the Department of Labor.

Here is an illustration:

In a great textile mill of New England, the workers clamored for better conditions; they wanted shorter working hours; they wanted assurance that they would not be dismissed without notice; they wanted certain agreements with their employers as to the rates of pay, and they sought an agreement with their employers to reach these understandings through a committee of their own numbers. The employers turned a deaf ear to the proposals and would not even discuss them. A strike was the alternative which the workers offered.

One might say that was a private matter and that the government had no right to mix into it. But the Constitution's preamble says that the government is, among other things, "for the people." Surely, here was an instance where something could be done for the people, for workers and employers alike.

The Department of Labor did mix into the controversy. It sent several men to the scene. They listened to the grievances of the workers and to the statements of the employers. They suggested ways out, one after another, until they were able to get a committee from the workers and a committee from the owners to sit in the same room. Eventually, these secret discussions, always with a conciliator from the Department of Labor participating, developed a compromise on which each side had yielded certain concessions.

The terms are not material here, but suffice it to say there was no strike in that mill and there probably never will be one for the reason that each side learned something about fairness and the rights of the other fellow.

That controversy was simple compared with some that arise and with which the department has to deal in order to do what its officials regard as their public duty that there may be peace in commerce and industry. It shows, nevertheless, how the multiple eye of the government is upon us all.

And in connection with this last reference, one must recall that in this same department there is what has come to be known as the children's bureau. It goes beyond the working man in its course of duty. The welfare of children of all classes come within its surveillance, and throughout the country one now finds juvenile courts, orphanages and other institutions having to do with children who are receiving constant advice from the bureau in Washington, D.C. It watches industry, too, that there may be no undue dangers developed, that conditions conducive to disease may not be continued and that every aid within the power of the national government is extended to correct them.

Another phase of the department's work gives it control of the entry into the United States of foreigners. Our immigration law is perhaps the most stringent in the world, because it is our policy to conserve our racial standards. The "melting pot" is receiving no more foreign blood in quantity. The department watches this closely, and it seems to it that those who are admitted either become American citizens, swear allegiance to our flag and adopt our traditions, or else they go back home. And this job of Americanizing foreigners is one which obviously must strengthen our nation in order that it may live in the future.

The osprey, if protected, or permitted to live in peace, is capable of adapting itself to civilized conditions, and the presence of one or more series of this handsome and harmless bird about a large body of water would provide much of interest and entertainment.

DISPELS MYSTERY OF BANK BUSINESS

Country Banker Gives Simplified Picture of How a Bank Works to Help Other People's Business

A COUNTRY banker recently prepared the following simplified statement for his neighbors on just how a bank goes about helping them:

"It is the most important part of a bank's business to lend money. Of all the money deposited in a bank, the law requires that a certain percentage be kept on hand as a reserve to meet the demands of depositors. It is the business of its officers to lend the balance conservatively and safely.

"The loans of a properly managed bank are invariably made to those it believes are able to repay, and always on condition that they be repaid at a stipulated time.

"The promise of an individual to repay a loan to a bank on a certain date is as sacredly inviolable as the promise of a bank to repay its depositors on demand, or, in the case of a certificate of deposit, on the date it falls due. When it comes to be known of an individual that he 'always pays,' his credit is established and his bank is always glad to extend him needed accommodations.

"A well managed bank never capitalizes industries. That is, it does not place its loans in fixed form, but places them where they are to be used for temporary requirements, and when they will be taken up at the time specified.

How a Bank Lends

"It is not the function of a bank to become a partner in industries, nor could it be legitimately done with the money of depositors. Its loans must be kept in 'liquid form'—that is, repayable in cash at stated intervals.

"A bank must use the greatest discrimination in making loans. A stranger cannot expect accommodations. It is customary for the borrower to make a statement of his financial affairs, which is kept in the bank's records. It is a punishable offense to make a false statement for the purpose of borrowing funds.

"Naturally, in their dealing with the regular depositors of the bank, its officers become well acquainted with their characters and their resources and are thus in a position to determine how large a line of credit each one is entitled to. That is one of the great advantages of being a bank depositor.

"The man who knows how to get into debt wisely, that is, who borrows money with which to make money through legitimate enterprise, is the borrower whom the bank is looking for. By the frank interchange of opinion and a free discussion of various projects, the borrower is often guided and helped by his banker.

"In order to procure a line of credit at a bank three things are important:

"1. A statement of assets showing a basis of credit in the way of invested capital, or collateral of sufficient value to cover amount of loan, or

"2. An endorser whose credit is established at the bank; and

"3. Average deposits of a sufficient amount to justify the extension of the desired accommodation."

AS WILL ROGERS SEES IT

Will Rogers recently told why the banks had got into trouble. "Don't blame it all on the bankers," he said. "When we all needed money they loaned it to us—but when they needed it we couldn't pay it back."

Advertising Aids Business Revival

NEW YORK—Aggressive concerns are expanding business by effective advertising despite depressed business conditions, declared A. W. Diller, advertising counsel, at a bankers' conference here recently.

"Is 1933 a good year in which to advertise?" Mr. Diller asked. "Yes, if 1933 is a good year to stay in business, to reinforce the public's confidence in you, to put more business on the books. There is new business to be had today and aggressive companies are getting it. But new business will come in only if you go out for it. Advertising certainly goes out for it.

"Will people read newspaper advertisements these days? They will read anything that interests them. There are plenty of present-day arguments for business."

Advertising Mistakes

A QUESTION before many of us is what change of advertising policy, if any, should be made in view of present financial and business conditions. It is perfectly natural for us to give consideration to some degree of retrenchment, but it is dangerous to let reduction in expenditure be such as to bring about a real gap in the continuity of the advertising. It is a common mistake for some advertisers to think that they can turn advertising on and off, like water from a faucet, and expect it to become immediately effective whenever they are prepared to resume operations. Advertising does not work that way. Temporary conditions should not influence us to make too serious inroads on the program of advertising, which can be wisely conceived only on a long term basis.—Francis H. Sisson, President, American Bankers Association.

Wake Up Your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and out." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Beware of a substitute. 25¢ at all stores. © 1931, C. M. Co.
